The bougainvillea flowers bloomed
Up upon the water tower
Searching among the lost stars
Up into the wrinkled sky

Nowhere to be
No stories to read
And storks
Have taken the babies far away

Even your worst dreams
I'll eat them all for you
Let the pain, pain, go away
With calming song

The bougainvillea flowers bloomed
Up upon the water tower
The dawn looking like hydrangeas
And the sleeping waterway clear

Trembling
You're pretending not to listen
Dozing
It just won't stop hurting you

The stories of your memories
Tell them to me, in all the vagueness of their forms
I'll drink up even the darkness
And let out a breath, a faint voice

Oh, while the outlines have been lost
Here, a lullaby for you alone

Even your worst dreams

I'll eat them all for you
As your tears pain me inside

Even when, with all too much cruelty
You're drowned by the night, stay at my side
This morning, we dreamt together
A dream that frightened me to take in
A pale dream that drank the light
