Birthday birthday song

Dying a dog's death in a tide pool
So is my countenance at the end of a gallant attempt to push myself
In the wagon, half-priced Converse on both feet
Twilight, the scent of a melody emerges

Right now I live through each day as though tossing a dice
Is there even any meaning in smiling broadly?
No one takes any interest in that G-code
You used to love me so much

If this troublesome heart would someday all turn to ashes
Right here, right now, I set fire to this jar crammed full of flower petals
If I wish more strongly than anyone, I'd be able to dive into the faraway cr ashes of thunder
So I sing, though it sounds like garbage
It's still a birthday birthday song

Stained, sagged cheeks suitable for this dark horse
Disgruntled, I opened up the hole in the wall
Those 3 words I couldn't say at the time
The brass band plays a melody

Even though I'm not serious, with my sagacious face
I pretend to be a gloomy nihilist
No one listen to that B-code
Nevertheless, you believed in it

"Ready, go!" The sound of the pistol resounds, and before I know it I've mis sed my chance
Right now, touch me in the depths of hell so I start running I'm more alone than anyone else, I sing a song that reaches you more than an yone else
So I sing, though it's idiotic
It's still a birthday birthday song

I forced out the screams that were all too much
Once again, you merely line up these worthless words
Side-by-side in their positions

At the end of being humiliated, dishonored and shamed
Where have I ended up?

No matter how much it is, sing
There's nowhere I can go
For this reason, I want to meet you Right now, now, now

If this troublesome heart would someday all turn to ashes
Right here, right now, I set fire to this jar crammed full of flower petals
If I wish more strongly than anyone, I'd be able to dive into the faraway cr ashes of thunder
So I sing, though it sounds like garbage
It's still a birthday birthday song
