

Juliet And Mark

Coyne, Kevin

I say now Juliet, you lost your heart and soul, you don't believe in a thing at all, no no no no You lost your spirit again

I say Mark, you sit in the dark, sitting facing the wall, nobody seems to ever call no no no You lost your spirit again

Funny how the gramophone never seems to play when you're down, when you're down

You open up the curtains and the world is spinning round, round and round

Said Juliet, read all the books, you read them all, you tore them up no no no You lost your spirit again

I say Mark, don't stay in the dark, climb a wall, punch a hole through the ceiling, anything no no no You lost your spirit again

Funny how the gramophone never seems to play when you're down

You open up the curtains and the world seems to go round and round, round and round

I said Juliet, yes I'm knocking, knocking on your walls and pipes and doors no no no You lost your spirit again

I said Mark, there's a lark in the sky singing, punch a hole in that roof, see the sky no no no You lost your spirit again

Funny how the gramophone never seems to play when you're down You open up the curtains and the world seems to go round and round I said Juliet, I've lost patience, I'm running, gonna catch a train, no no no no I found my spirit again

I said Mark, I've been in the dark with you too long in the corners, I'm moving out no no no no I found my spirit again

And it's funny how the gramophone never seems to play when you're down, when you're down You open up the curtains and the world goes round and round Juliet, hope you see me, hope you see me smiling in the park today cause no no no no I found my spirit again

And I said Mark, don't be sharp with me, my mind's free, I found a way no no no you're wrong I found my spirit again And it's funny how the gramophone always seems to play when you're up up, up in this world Strange how the curtains they fall down and the light comes shining in Let it shine
