Rosetta

Kim Wilde

Bigger than a mountain high
Core of ice over two miles wide
Spinning millions of miles away
Tell us all about the human race
Tell us from where we've come and who we are
Are we the dust of a distant star?
Does it clearly matter that we're here?
Is our irrelevance a thing we fear?

Tell me who you are...

What is your destiny?
Are you a star still shining?
Or are you burning up and running out of time?
Can love redeem your soul?
Tell me what you believe in
What is this precious thing called life?
Tell me who you are... who you are

Walking down this busy streets
Strangers passing next to me
Knowing this is all a game
In our bones we're just the same
And all the answers we're searching for
Are deep inside our icy core
We need to journey deep inside
To understand why we're alive

Tell me who we are...

What is our destiny?
Are we a star still shining?
Or are we burning up and running out of time?
Can love redeem our soul?
Tell me what you believe in
What is this precious thing called life?
Tell me who we are... who we are

Tell me who we are
