If the sun shines down on my face in the morning and I don't open my eyes write a letter home for me tell my mother I've died

Tell her I tried

Tell her I loved nothing more in my life

Apologize for every time I kept her up at night

Tell her she was right and if god doesn't want me then things will still be alright tell her I did nothing I didn't have to live

If the Sun shines down on my face in the morning and I don't open my eyes write a letter home for me tell my brothers I've died [X2]

Tell them hold their heads there ain't much to tell them they knew every secret I kept but tell them we're doomed and if they don't slow down then I will be seeing them soon but tell them they're soldiers tell them my suffering is finally over but don't tell them a lie because no one cries when people like us die

If the Sun shines down on my face in the morning and I don't open my eyes write a letter home for me tell my lovers I've died [X2]

Tell them this time we're done tell them I thought I was too much for just one but tell them I was just young although my mind and my body was as old and as worn as they come tell them they are blessings tell them I didn't deserve them my mind is fucking racing tell them I meant good and that I wish I could have gave them more than I could

If the Sun shines down on my face in the morning and I don't open my eyes write a letter home for me tell the others I've died
