I'm losing my faith again, losing my open hand Losing my how and why, losing my great divide And in this world where we are, who can say what's going too far?

You punch out the windows baby, I slash all the tires

I'm feeling that undertow, like maybe it's time to go
It's getting so sick and thin, getting right under my skin
And in this song that we sing, who could ever point to one thin g?

You are still in hiding baby, I am still on fire

Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves to be saved
And I am sorry that we're sinking but we're sinking just the sa me

I'm losing my faith in you, losing my balance too How does it get so wrong, how can it all take so long And in this time that we live, who could find a way to give a d amn

That we are drowning in two separate stormy seas?

Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves to be saved
And I am sorry that we're sinking but we're sinking just the sa
me

Darling, don't you ever wonder if we two could both slip under? Learn to sink and learn to swim and breathe again, and breathe again

All these tears that we cry Who can say if we will live or die Stand or fall, live in love or none at all?

Waiting under the waves Waiting under the waves Waiting under the waves ...
