United Airlines Flight 93
Left 8:01 from Gate 17
Victims of a war they never knew existed
Hell looked them in the eye
And still they resisted

Lost brave souls your courage we remember Sacrificed young lives last September We still hear your battle cry Are you ready, okay, let's roll Are you ready, okay, let's roll

So began the massacre at twenty thousand feet Red devils leap in charge, pulled captain from his seat They watched them cut and slash, and anyone left standing We knew deep in our hearts, this plane would not be landing

Never once were they ever in control Lives were lost, but they never took our soul We still hear your battle cry Are you ready, okay, let's roll Are you ready, okay, let's roll

Skies of Pennsylvania became a battle ground Two hundred miles away, the towers had come down One last chance to say goodbye, he called her on his phone Said he knew what must be done, "I am not coming home."

Are you ready, okay, let's roll
