

Then Again, Maybe You Were Right

La Dispute

I spoke too soon it seems
For you made a home in my dreams while I slept
You kept running yourself through my head
Like, I won't be dead yet
I said, you don't understand
We had no control, they stole it
Love's been so unfair to me
But see, boy, that's my point
You must move on

Then felt her ghost move in me
I heard her voice call out my name
But this time it faded out, away
I'll bury it today, today

So I breathed her name out into a cold, cold room
Watched her ghost ascend the walls and then dissolve
This time I choose to let it go
This time I choose to let her go
I will not let my fear become the only world I have ever known
I know my heart, come kiss my mouth
And set me free, I have wounds to mend
And we'll be more than friends, my dear
I fear I've changed my mind again
But boy, you're too late
But boy, you're too late
My love, you're too late
Oh God, it's too late
Too late
Too late