

Another Year Older

Larry Fleet

You woulda loved this snow, and how the town shut down
'Cause everybody in this family is in the living room right now
Tried to make your stew, made a mess of your kitchen
Stuck right to your recipe, but there was still somethin' missin'

Heartbreak feels like yesterday even after all this time
And I'm still finding breadcrumbs of all the good you left behind

Your garden's still there growing, sunflowers ten-feet tall
The western wind starts blowing, them ole wind chimes sing your song
It's bitter and it's sweet, so many memories and so much I wanna say
You'da been another year older today

I finally got that job, I finally found someone
She's been keepin' me in line just like you woulda done
Yeah, I slowed my roll, started takin' in the view
There's a whole lotta colors that I never really noticed, but I see 'em since I lost you

Your garden's still there growing, sunflowers ten-feet tall
The western wind starts blowing, them ole wind chimes sing your song
It's bitter and it's sweet, so many memories and so much I wanna say
You'da been another year older today

I see you in the mirror, I see you everywhere
When I need you most is when I know that you're still there

Your garden's still there growing, sunflowers ten-feet tall
The western wind starts blowing, them ole wind chimes sing your song
It's bitter and it's sweet, so many memories and so much I wanna say
You'da been another year older today
