Wandering Kind

Laura Veirs

A strange July a storm came down from the North and pulled out the salt and it tore out the leaves from the pear tree my canopy

In the twigs and the bugs of sow I knew somehow i was free I held a stone above my bones i was shaking

In the blue stained glass church you gathered up my heart soldered together all the tiny, shattered parts I said "All I can see in front of me is the armpit of a crow" you closed the wing opened the door and you ran into the summer yard

'Cause the sun's been known to shine on our wandering kind yeah, the sun's been known to shine on our wandering kind

Clocking on her wooden board the tattooed girl took up her swords and plunged them down into the earth a twinkling tide filled up her eyes and poured out to the lawn we made a raft out of the scraps of her skirt and sailed 'til dawn

'Cause the sun's been known to shine on our wandering kind yeah, the sun's been known to shine on our wandering kind (Repeat)

Our wandering kind (fade out)
