Nobody ever really goes away

I feel fine, just look in my eyes
I'm balling tears, I hope you don't mind
Backyard pool, do a triple backflip
Broken neck, it was wet so I slipped
No I feel fine, just leave me be
I know you're not here, but you're somewhere
Red blood in the cyan water

Nobody ever really goes away

Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe
Nobody ever really goes away

Time moves slow when you start talking
I see you as I'm barefeet walking
In pitch black dreams and happy nightmares
You appear, though you're not really there
Favourite things, sax and some comfort snacks
Had my back when I got off track
Time heals all wounds, hurts to say but

Nobody ever really goes away

Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe
Seems like this feeling will stay
Joe
Joe

Nobody ever really goes away

Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe
Nobody ever really goes away
Joe

Uhm. I think they called me like a tune or something, or sent me a message on Facebook. And they had just made their first song, yeah, so I've been with them from the very start. Like I'm the unofficial official third member of the band, which is fun. That's so cool. Anyways,

I'm with Johannes Greve Muskat. Did I pronounce your name correctly?
