

The weight of the world on your shoulders
The silence so deafening
Know that there's hurt on the table
And the walls are closing in

I know sometimes it's so black and white
It's even harder with pain in those eyes

When you've cried every river dry
When you're a stranger in your own life
When you need somebody
You need somebody to hold

When you're cold out on the bridge
And the pavement's giving in
I'll be your lifeline
A hand that you know

When you're needing it the most
When you're needing it the most

The fear of losing the battle
When the fight is within yourself
Alone and locked up in your castle
Let me in if you need my help

I know sometimes it's so black and white
It's even harder with pain in those eyes

When you've cried every river dry
When you're a stranger in your own life
When you need somebody
You need somebody to hold

When you're cold out on the bridge
And the pavement's giving in
I'll be your lifeline
A hand that you know

When you're needing it the most
When you're needing it the most

When you've cried every river dry
When you're a stranger in your own life

I'll be your lifeline
A hand that you know
