

deep the water

Lewis Watson

When your hair spills light on my shoulders
And your eyes wide emerald green
You are the love warm when it gets colder
The silver sunset onto the sea
And as the gray notes sing through the windows
Where do you go?
Why do you leave?
As the waves grow
Harder the days go
Darling I'm folding
I'm on my knees

You give me nothing
When there's nothing else
So deep the water
But you're hiding in the shallows
Then you come running
When you're running out
So deep the water
So deep the water
And I'm left here drowning out

When your heart weighs down on my shoulders
And your eyes wide lose me at sea
Your words make a fire and smolder
You are the moon pulling tides over me
Giving me gray notes that sing through the windows
Where do you go?
Why do you leave?
As the waves grow
Harder the days go
Darling I'm folding
I'm on my knees

You give me nothing
When there's nothing else
So deep the water
But you're hiding in the shallows
Then you come running
When you're running out
So deep the water
So deep the water

Losing light
Beneath the silent sky
We're losing light
Losing light
We're sinking slowly
As we're losing light my love

You give me nothing
So deep the water
But you're hiding in the shallows
Then you come running

When you're running out
So deep the water
So deep the water

When there's nothing else
So deep the water
Then you come running
When you're running out
So deep the water
So deep the water

So deep the water
So deep the water
So deep the water

So deep the water
So deep the water
