

Hello Again

Liana Flores

Sundrops falling everywhere
Walking through an orange-blossom blizzard in the air
Springtime slip around the bend
See the summer berries dark and heavy on their stems

Morning, yawn yourself awake
The light of the dawn brings another day to make
Season songs I'll sing you when
I kiss you goodbye until hello again
Hello again, hello again, hello again

Childhood summer wild and green
Look up through the branches to a liquid sky between Cycling downhill we're wheeling on away
Out of sight, the pale sunlight glows softly every day

If forever's to be found
Why seek if I'm happy just having you around?
Season songs I'll sing you when
I kiss you goodbye until hello again
Hello again, hello again, hello again

And if our bodies should turn into dust
I knew you and death won't take that away from us