

Our lives can get tangled up in progress
And the only thing that makes sense is living in regret.
And I'll never be able to explain how we made it this far,
But I know that this is what controls my heart.

I wouldn't trade what I have for anything.
Are we dreaming 'cause we know we're not awake.
Closing your eyes will not erase our mistakes.

And you say you're not okay and it's a part of life that you can't explain.

We'd all love to run home but we know we don't have one.
We're all just orphans with no names,
We're all just fragments of someone's cruel game.
No place feels like home 'cause we're all alone.
And this emptiness might make you feel hopeless
But be hopeful in knowing there's no one to let you down.

I spent my days living inside a box where
My mind controls everything I feel and the only people who understand know
That there's nothing that can heal
Constantly stumbling unto the next terrible thing.
My thoughts always get the best of me.

Everyone around me thinks they understand but they don't really see.

We'd all love to run home but we know we don't have one.
We're all just orphans with no names,
We're all just fragments of someone's cruel game.
No place feels like home 'cause we're all alone.
And this emptiness might make you feel hopeless
But be hopeful in knowing there's no one to let you down.

There's no one.

And you say you're not okay and it's a part of life that you can't explain.
Everyone around me thinks they understand but they don't really see.

We'd all love to run home but we know we don't have one.
We're all just orphans with no names,
We're all just fragments of someone's cruel game.
No place feels like home 'cause we're all alone.
And this emptiness might make you feel hopeless
But be hopeful in knowing there's no one to let you down.

We die alone.