The look in your eyes, went without saying
The blue in the sky, song that was playing
And the smell of your hair, the way it lingers
I can still go there, snap of a finger

I remember everything
Burning like a candle in the back of my mind
Holding on way too much, every touch
I wish I could forget that you were ever mine
I remember everything

The crack in your voice, said you were leaving The cold in the room, that desperate feeling And the sound of the door, as it was closing Yeah the knife to the heart, I still own it

I remember everything
Burning like a candle in the back of my mind
Holding on way too much, every kiss, every touch
I wish I could forget that you were ever mine
I remember everything

Call it a curse, call it a blessing
The good and the bad, it's all worth missing

I remember everything
It's burning like a candle in the back of my mind
Holding on way too much, every touch
I wish I could forget that you were ever mine
I remember everything
It's burning like a candle in the back of my mind
Holding on way too much, every kiss, every touch
I wish I could forget that you were ever mine