

Thank You

Logic

This concludes the program—

Damn man, we been walking forever...

Well, Thalia's tracking system says we'll be there in just over an hour...

Shit, at least we got good walking music—or is that it?

(laughing)

No man, I'm queueing up the fourth album now—his final one...

Nigga, what the hell are you talkin' bout?

Man, he has like a million albums!

I mean the final Young Sinatra, the fourth one.

Aww, shit man, you had me trippin'!

I was about to say...

(Yeah, yeah) Let's get back to this boom bap shit.

Yeah, so we just gon' let this shit breathe one time

Shout-out my boy Henry right here in the studio

Aye, yeah—

Check, check, mic check, one, two

Alright this is classic shit, yeah

I coulda never imagine that this shit here could happen
Went from the basement to thirty million just off of rappin'
Young Sinatra, that boy that brought you so many classics
Ain't never comin' with nothin' less than the illest tactics
Thought the series was over, but we just gettin' started
I won't ever leave this rap shit, no I can't depart it
From the trap to the boom bap
To Young Sinatra to Tarantino
We know he do that
Bitch, I got the flame, who dat?
I'm the new Kanye when they was like "Who Kanye?"
I got that fire in my soul to make these classics, aye
I decided to write this letter on a private jet
'Cause in many ways it still feel like I ain't made it yet
For every goal I attain, I set like ten more
But I had to take a break to write you, that's for sure
Take a moment and celebrate how we all alive
Had to write this letter here over a Nujabes vibe
Fuck that rapper shit, fuck a punchline
This for every single fan that know every single line
So I'm saying thank you for loving me
For setting me free and letting me be me

Thank you, thank you

For letting me speak my mind

And putting it all on the line

Through the sunshine and the rain

Through the good times and the pain

And never staying the same

And having the courage to change

Through the sunshine and the rain
Through the good times and the pain
For never staying the same
And having the courage to change
Thank you, thank you
For letting me speak my mind
And putting it all on the line
Through the sunshine and the rain
Through the good times and the pain
For never staying the same
And having the courage to change
Through the sunshine and the rain
Through the good times and the pain
For never staying the same
And having the courage to change
