

Trick Of The Light (Alternative Ending)

Lonely The Brave

Head is spinning like it's never done before,
And I don't think I'll be sleeping anymore.
Your legs are twisted and your fingernails are claws,
You stood there with your face turned to the door.
I said, am I doomed forever,
Will this ending never come,
Can someone give me something to call it off.
I crawled across the ceiling as you sunk beneath the floor,
I don't think I can take this anymore.

You come sneaking up on sleeping eyes,
And I swear it's always just a trick of the light.
Don't you wake me up I'm dreaming out,
And I swear it's always just a trick of the light.

So I'll tell you like it is,
Hang my head at the reasons,
There's a place where people go for that.
Cause the guilt came crashing in,
And said I never will be leaving,
I don't think I can handle that.
Those days, they set it off,
And it kind of rips your heart out,
On my knees I swear to that.

Battle stations all alone,
This is where the hard times roll.
I've got a place for you at home,
This is where your head, it goes.

Facing up, I found your letter,
Made me want to call you,
Go back to where we started from again.
Waking up and I feel better,
You're taking up my headroom,
I'll wrap my withered arms around you.
There's a place where you go dreaming,
Send off trails of thunder,
And I'll trace them up and down your spine, again.
So you know that if you feel it,
I'll be waiting for you,
Waiting through the seasons,
I'll wait for you.

All just a trick of the light,
All just a trick of the light.