

Lyin', Cheatin', Woman Chasin', Honky Tonkin', Whiskey Drinkin' You

Loretta Lynn

On the radio
A singer sings another hurtin' song
About a wife who sits and cries
While her husband lays out all night long
When he finally staggers in [?] give him one more time
It's like I've heard it all before
Guess who I've got pictured in my mind, yea

It's lyin', cheatin', woman chasin'
Honky tonkin', whiskey drinkin' you
Somebody must be taking notes
While watching all the lowdown things you do
Who is the sorry so-and-so
Responsible for what I'm going through?
It's lyin', cheatin', woman chasin'
Honky tonkin', whiskey drinkin' you

Every time I hear the one
About your cheatin' heart, it sure hits home
The radio sure tells it like it is Every time I turn it on
Some woman's always hangin' on
While waiting for the man who is hanging out
It's not hard to realize
Who this country singer sings about

It's lyin', cheatin', woman chasin'
Honky tonkin', whiskey drinkin' you
Somebody must be taking notes
While watching all the lowdown things you do
Who is the sorry so-and-so
Responsible for what I'm going through?
It's lyin', cheatin', woman chasin'
Honky tonkin', whiskey drinkin' you

It's lyin', cheatin', woman chasin'
Honky tonkin', whiskey drinkin' you
