

You Snap Your Fingers (And I'm Back In Your Hands)

Loretta Lynn

I cried a river, washing your memory away
And I finally made it, at least, till you phoned me today
I nearly hung up, but teardrops destroyed my plans
You snap your fingers and, just like that, I'm back in your hands

You snap your fingers and, just like that, I'm back in your hands
Starting all over, right back where I've always been
And I'm just beginning to learn some things never end
You snap your fingers and, just like that, I'm back in your hands

And I'm just beginning to learn some things never end
You snap your fingers and, just like that, I'm back in your hands
