Dirty Little Heart

Lostprophets

Another night, another year that's gone "Raise your glass!" I'm not home tonight Nothing's changed, but everything is different Getting cold in the bus stop light All the days, all the times we spent making plans for another life Staring out of a back seat window, making cuts with a plastic knife

This dirty heart still longs to beat Back in your arms Back on your streets

These open wounds you gave me These broken bones will take me Crawling on through the debris of my dirty little heart

Another flight, still I don't belong An empty glass, still not home tonight I look for change, but only find indifference I'm growing old in the glare of a spotlight All those nights, all these hearts I've haunted All the memories we've shared I wonder if this will ever be different I wonder if they will ever be spared

This dirty heart still longs to beat Back in your arms Back on your streets

These open wounds you gave me These broken bones will take me Crawling on through the debris of my dirty little

These open wounds you gave me These broken bones will take me Crawling on through the debris of my dirty little heart

This dirty heart still longs to beat Back in your arms Back on your streets

These open wounds you gave me These broken bones will take me Crawling on through the debris of my dirty little

These open wounds you gave me These broken bones will take me Crawling on through the debris of my dirty little heart