

A Candle in the Window (Please Come Home)

Lucky Boys Confusion

When you're pressed, pressed, pressed up against me
The center of my universe
The only place I never had to be rehearsed
Curled up tight, breathing gently
Talking in your sleep again
Living innocence in times of fallen man

Sunrise, don't cry
Listen to the birds
They sing that everything's alright
And he'll be home again to hold you
Sunrise, don't cry
Listen to the birds
They sing that everything's alright
And he'll be home again to hold you
He'll be home again to hold you tight

Days flew by when you were with me
Now missing you almost hurts
Until the siren sounds and feelings all disperse
Words don't come
Telephone me, tell me what I'm dying for
I've lost a piece of piece fighting this pointless war

Sunrise, don't cry
Listen to the birds
They sing that everything's alright
And he'll be home again to hold you
Sunrise, don't cry
Listen to the birds
They sing that everything's alright
And he'll be home again to hold you
He'll be home again to say

The war is over
Finally we can sleep
The war is over
Finally we can sleep

Sunrise, don't cry
Listen to the birds
They sing that everything's alright
And he'll be home again to hold you
Sunrise, don't cry
Listen to the birds
They sing that everything's alright
And he'll be home again to hold you
He'll be home again to say

The war is over
Finally we can sleep
The war is over
Finally we can sleep
The war is over now

Sunrise, don't cry
Listen to the birds

They sing that everything's alright
And he'll be home again to hold you
