

A Different You

Lunik

in a different universe far from here there's another me that fell in love with another you she's sitting in that apartment similar to mine listening to the same emptiness and quiet that surrounds her day and night and fills her up from inside

but when I chose to leave she chose to stay and when you held on to trouble the other you just let it fade away
he doesn't really care whether he is wrong or right and she's able to see grey where I see black or white just one little step in another direction... one little thought you're holding on to...

one little second of hesitation...
...could change your life and you'd be a different you you'd be a different you they're fighting the same old demons but somehow they seem to manage it all better they get on with each other and when you went to see that girl the other you would second guess

and end that mess they would band together where we both tried to dot they were able to move on where we were running on the spot
running on the spot
running on the spot

just one little step in another direction... one little thought you're holding on to...
one little second of hesitation...
...could change your life and you'd be a different you
you'd be a different you

why can't we be like them and chase those ghosts away? forget about pride tonight? we'd leave those fears behind and not run away don't you think it might be worth a try? it might be worth a try!
you'd be a different you and I'd be a different me and we would start up new