Lyrical Lemonade

It's been a while since I was seventeen again
And I was young and love was not Something I knew much about, mmm
But now I'm older
Got myself thinking about what is love and loss
When it's hard it gets a lot for me

And you called
Yeah, you called me yesterday
Yeah, I
And, I
Hear your call
Hear you calling back to me

Sayin'
When you come home
When you come home
I'll tell you all my stories
We can face the sun
When you come home
When you come home
I'll be waiting at your door, dear
Ready to take you, oh

Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah
I'm floating through that wind like October leaves
I got up and got it, nobody told me leave
I took ignition with nobody permission
I had to risk it, on a mission trying to find the water, now I'm fishin'
Gotta wonderful voice, but I always listen
I fly high in the sky, got 20/20 vision
I spread my wings real wide and cut the wind
I glide in the clouds, makin' calls to all my friends

And you called
Yeah, you called me yesterday
Yeah, I
Hear you call
Hear you calling back to me

Sayin'
When you come home
When you come home
I'll tell you all my stories
We can face the sun
When you come home
When you come home
I'll be waiting at your door, dear
Ready to take you, oh

The early bird gets the worm, I eat both
The sun only seems to burn when I fly close
The humans only aim at me when I fly low
The snakes only smile at me when they get hungry
I can feel the breeze through the leaves, Winter's coming
I'm flying through the trees and debris, wings humming

I don't have a single regret since I left the nest
It's just a couple of twigs, it's just an empty egg, right?
