

Don't Remember Leaving

Mac McAnally

It's not always as simple as "Once Upon a Time"
Wishing on a star and turning on a dime
The picture's cloudy and you want it to be clear
Little voices always just around the bend
Little choices you must question or defend
The path you started on and how you wound up here

I don't remember leaving
Apparently I'm gone
No way to come out even
No plan for moving on
I don't remember leaving
Apparently I'm gone

In and out of fashion
Running hot and cold
Spoken of in past tense when you're twenty nine-years old
Total strangers seem familiar with your name
Whatever fraction of your dreams you realize
Things you may or may not want appear before your eyes
The story changes but the Truth remains the same

I don't remember leaving
Apparently I'm gone
No way to come out even
No plans for moving on
I don't remember leaving
Apparently I'm gone

Above it all
Troubles seem so small
About the time you feel at home in your own skin
There's that gravity again

I don't remember leaving
Apparently I'm gone
No way to come out even
No plans for moving on
I don't remember leaving
I don't remember leaving

Apparently I'm gone
