

Time Difference

Madi Diaz

You could get on a flight right now
But we both know that you'd never touch down
And I don't make the rules, but the rules say
I'm always gonna miss you somehow

Call it divine intervention
You call me, and in less than two seconds
I just don't get it, we lose the connection
And it happens before I can mention

I'll always love you, I still say it
The words come out, but they don't make it
And we're younger, and we're older
And we can never get over the time difference
Mmm, we can never get over the time difference
Mmm

So I call you when I know you're sleeping
And missing you comes natural, like breathing in
It stays like a dream or an old movie scene I play over and over again
And it feels just like holding your hand

I'll always love you, I still say it
And the words come out, but they don't make it
And we're younger, and we're older
And we can never get over the time difference
Mmm, and we can never get over the time difference
Ah-ah, mmm

You don't get a love song
But damn it, you get me for God knows how long
You don't get a love song
But damn it, you get me for God knows how long
I'll always love you, God knows how long
I'll always love you, God knows how long
I'll always love you, God knows how long
I'll always love you
