

My Full Name

Madison Cunningham

I love it when you say my full name
And the way you always speak your mind
When the needle finally finds the vein
And all your little sayings become mine
Your brother only shares your family shame
But he doesn't really know you

I've been spinning out
On too many big words you could do without
And everything we dare not say out loud
Are written on our faces

There's a water leak the size of Berlin
Coming from this vessel that we're in Running from my eyes to your chin
Love's a kind of sorrow worth saving
When a part of me went missing
A case was never opened

But I've been keeping count
Of all the wildflowers
Where the plane went down
And every living soul that's never found
Are written in these verses

I'm finding out that I'm allergic to Every living thing that isn't you
As I say it now I know it's true

I don't wanna leave this town
But you know very well I can't wait around
But since it's getting too late to change it now
Might as well embrace it
