

The Illest Villains

Madvillain

[As luck would have it, one of America's two most powerful villains of the next decade is turned loose to strike terror into the hearts of men.]

(grunting)

[To shock women into uncontrolled hysteria.]

(woman screaming)

"Don't touch that!"

[The villains themselves were ultimately responsible for much of the popularity. Audiences loved to hate. The importance of the villain was not overlooked, of course one of the worst of all was Madvillain. They had no code of ethics.]

"What's the matter, a guy was only tryin' to have fun-"
"

"Get to work on these boys, anybody bring a gun for me?"

"Yeah here's one."

[Not one but two - typical villain releases included...]

"I know they wanna kiss me, but don't let anyone see me like that - please doctor help me!"

[...and a sequel...]

"Master of all-"

(woman screaming)

[Both the villains were to meet in-]

"Your mother was the lightning!"

[Two historical figures, outlaws and desperadoes if that, the villainous pair of really nice boys who just happened to be on the wrong side of the law. Three hundred and sixty degrees. Similar sequences could not be defeated. Villains who possess supernatural abilities - villains who were the personification of carnage. Madvillain, more accurately, the dark side of our beings. Perhaps it is due to this Seminole connection that audiences can relate their experience in life with the villains and their dastardly doings.]