

Smoke

Makari

I'll kiss your forehead once more
Then we can settle the score

Cause on the night you were born
The sky would open to storm

Now I can't know, I can't say why we exist
But you can't, no you can't get back what you missed

I know you're growing colder
But getting older doesn't shoulder the weight

You've been coming close
But this is not the end

There's still some much to learn before
You start to feel a change
Just take the lessons, give it space
And watch it rearrange

Time will take its toll
Upon a long lost friend

You can't take back the words of smoke
Billowing from your mouth
I swear to God that someday soon
We'll have this figured out

The sound of thunder in your head
Have you heard a word I've said?

Cause I don't know, I don't know if you'll escape
I've shown you those blue skies but can't relate

The weather's getting better, I guess, whatever
It still feels the same
You've been coming close
But this is not the end

There's still some much to learn before
You start to feel a change
Just take the lessons, give it space
And watch it rearrange

Time will take its toll
Upon a long lost friend

You can't take back the words of smoke
Billowing from your mouth
I swear to God that someday soon
We'll have this figured out

Dry your tears in the sun
After all these years
You're still numb

You've been coming close

But this is not the end

There's still some much to learn before
You start to feel a change
Just take the lessons, give it space
And watch it rearrange

Time will take its toll
Upon a long lost friend

You can't take back the words of smoke
Billowing from your mouth
I swear to God that someday soon
We'll have this figured out