

Embers

Marc Almond

One day you'd change and the fire in my heart
Now flickers to a dwindling flame
The place of my love
Is downed to a smolt up
My heart left out in the rain

All music is 'don't know' and words have no meaning
They can't express my pain

The embers are dying in my heart
And I'm sighing
The embers are dying in my heart
And I'm crying out to the night
One last time
Please, relight the pain
Or I'll fade away

Burning you a torch
Like sending you a message
But I wait as long as it takes
But an empire of anger
An army of anguish won't help my heart as it breaks

The embers are dying in my heart
And I'm sighing
The embers are dying in my heart
And I'm crying out to the night
One last time
Please, relight the pain, or I'll fade away

The embers are glowing
Though iced wind is blowing
Slowly we're drifting apart
I hope that you'll see
This torch that I'm burning
Signing with love from my heart

The embers are dying in my heart
And I'm sighing
The embers are dying in my heart
And I'm crying out to the night, one last time
Please, relight the pain, or I'll fade away

Light up the pain, light up the embers
Show me that you will love me again
No one remembers the efforts, only the pain
One day you'd change and
The fire in my heart
Now flickers to a dwindling flame
