

The Siren

Marc Hudson

Gazing down the endless roads enchanting me
Like a siren's song the streets are calling those Who hear her melody

Up above the skies ignite with untold dreams of all who dwell within
As the sun goes down over the city and the night begins

Is this a dream or am I finally where I belong?
Like the thousands before me, I've been searching for so long

Under amaranthine glitter lies a crimson shrine
A passage lost in time where gods look down from sacred mountains high above

Step into this midnight electric twilight and hold on

All around your heart will dance tonight a cadence mesmerising
Turn around and round again in cyan ecstasy
Climb the towers high into the sky behold the neon paradise
Where your hopes and dreams come alive
And you'll have the time of your life

Lost inside this world of starlight reveries
A wonder beyond all memories of another life
She calls to take me home

Step into this midnight electric twilight and hold on

All around your heart will dance tonight a cadence mesmerising
Turn around and round again in cyan ecstasy
Climb the towers high into the sky behold the neon paradise
Where your hopes and dreams come alive
And you'll have the time of your life tonight

Take my hand as we run underneath the amber fires
Don't let go as the path turns towards the stars ascending even higher
Behold the world shining bright for eternity

All around your heart will dance tonight a cadence mesmerising
Turn around and round again in cyan ecstasy
Climb the towers high into the sky behold the neon paradise
Where your hopes and dreams come alive
And you'll have the time of your life

See the world forever shine bright tonight