

Marshall Speaks

Marcus Miller

You know, so many people, indeed my own sons at times, look at me with an expression on the face. They don't believe I faced what I had to face. But if we don't look out, it's gonna happen again

What more is there to say? There is no little truth in the old refrain that one cannot legislate equality. Laws are concrete benefits that can change even the hearts of men

Well, there's so many people saying we've come so far. All you had to do was read those reports from the government, and sentence-wise, we're going back. We're not going forwards. No matter what happens with the civil rights bill, who can say we're moving ahead? There are movements by the different branches of this government that are sent to push back. Old lies being done more cleverly. Well, I don't care if it's clever or not, your foot on my neck will still strangle me

What more is there to say?

What more is there to say?