Blindly Blue

Matilda Mann

She was blindly blue with no reason to be
Out of context, she smiled endlessly
She couldn't quite figure out what felt so wrong
She didn't know why certain moments would stick for so long

She was blindly blue with no reason to be
And to compensate for what she believed
That it was his fault and not mine
It was back in the time when we were so naive
But they all just couldn't see, so they all just let her be

She was blindly blue with no reason to know
How the life that she lived was bound to go
And as she sat there, restless
From her mind that wouldn't trust us

I wish you'd known, I was you'd known, I wish you'd known
I wish I'd known, I wish I'd known

She was blindly blue and it's not 'cause of you
There's just something that she never quite saw through
And though inside, she knows what is true
I guess she never knew why she was blue
