

Refuge

Matt Corby

Fear lives, in these bones
I am helpless on, I'm so helpless on my own

We started giving in, our walls our wearing thin Our light is growing dim, we are So far from where we want to be There's nothing for me here
So grab your coat, let's leave this place my dear

The colours of my soul are seeking refuge
In somebody else's arms
Now I must try, to win them back somehow
I've fallen hard and fallen short
But love is not a winners game at all

Now I must try to forget about it now

Fear lives, in these bones
I am, helpless on I'm so helpless on my own

And will time get the better of me, we'll have to wait and see, for now I'll keep floating down this dark abyss, of loneliness

But before I leave, just one last kiss now

The colours of my soul are seeking refuge
In somebody else's arms,
Now I must try to win them back somehow

I've fallen hard, and fallen short
but love is not a winners game at all
now I must try to forget about it now

The colours of my soul are seeking refuge
in somebody else's arms
now I must try to win them back somehow