

Why Dream

Matt Corby

You're drinking, you're worn out You're way too good at getting what you want And I long for most to unleash you A world at home, just for diamonds on your coffin And I know its wrong, but I want it Just to be like you, but you talk too much to listen and I want you more, and we are meant to be broken and I forgive warmly, when you've got a change of heart

Oh why dream at all tonight
if you're keeping all the fear inside look into the bright screen that shows you all the places you dream to be oh just open up your eyes and celebrate how high we get to be no lies and no hate finally you owe it to yourself and I wait home, cause I cannot wait to live with you but I wont bother you, if you're worn out so give it back to me way too honest we are dividing everything among the few and I judge you warmly, blame it on the change of heart

that shows you all the places you dream to be
and celebrate how high we get to be no lies and no hate
finally you owe it to yourself

oh oh oh
Oh why dream at all tonight
