We all know that feeling When phantoms and shadows make reality dreary

But don't let them conquer you Don't let them shatter you

Some say when you disappear, there's a golden cathedral there And all the choir children sing your name
And they glue you back together again

We all know that feeling
When someone gets you wrong
And they don't know you from Adam

We've all judged and been judged on Some will lend a hand and your world falls off their table And your body gives in

But don't let them conquer you Don't let them shatter you

Some say when you disappear, there's a golden cathedral there And all the choir children sing your name
And they glue you back together again

So don't let them conquer you Don't let them shatter you Don't let them conquer you Don't let them shatter you

Some say when you disappear, there's a golden cathedral there And all the choir children sing your name.