

Tribulation

Matt Maeson

Darling, can't you see?
I'm a broken man with addictive tendencies
And I think I love you
But I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love just right
So, run away from me
Run as far as your dark-brown eyes can see
Just as soon as you know—

That I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love you right
Oh, and all the ways that you won't bend, are the only ways I live my life

Oh, and I'm tryna cope and burn just right, yeah
Oh, and I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love you right

Darling, I can see
You're a broken man with addictive tendencies
And I think I love you
But I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love just right
So, run away from me
Run as far as your dark-brown eyes can see
Just as soon as you know—

That I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love you right
Oh, and all the ways that you won't bend, are the only ways I live my
life

Oh, and I'm tryna cope and burn just right, yeah
Oh, and I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love you right

I think I'm better on my own
But I get so lost in you
I think I'm better on my own
But I'm so obsessed with you
I think I'm better on my own
But I get so lost in you
I think I'm better on my own
But I'm so obsessed with you

And I don't ever think I can Ever learn how to love you right
Oh, and all the ways that you won't bend, are the only ways I live my
life

Oh, and I'm tryna cope and burn just right, yeah
Oh, and I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love you right

And I don't ever think I can love you right
Oh, and I don't ever think I can ever learn how to love you right