It disappears again like a lie
The moment when it shined so bright
I try to catch it, but I can't
And eventually, it passes

You must be bearing it just like me

In the deep darkness where it's hard to see
The small flower that blooms, stumbling
Is this beautiful
In the old wilted memories
The smile that blooms faintly just once
Is this beautiful
Beautiful stranger

Without knowing where I was going
I just walked on like I was being pushed
The sighs pushed my body down
And I calmed my breaths and look around

To see if you are walking, like me

In the deep darkness where it's hard to see
The small flower that blooms, stumbling
Is this beautiful
In the old wilted memories
The smile that blooms faintly just once
Is this beautiful
Beautiful stranger
Beautiful stranger

In the old wilted memories
The smile that blooms faintly just once
Is this beautiful
In the deep darkness where it's hard to see
The small flower that blooms, stumbling
Is this beautiful
Beautiful stranger

I live on again like a lie...
