Cotton Candy

McCafferty

Cotton candy blue and pink hair is changing
I know your heart is fading now
That's alright, I know I'm fine
Take the train home from the city tonight
Fireworks out the window
Lean your head on my elbow
Cross the name off the checklist
Life is fine when it's like this now

Let these leaves fall on the ground
Let my demons finally drown
Let my body turn to stone
Let my heart fill all the holes
That spread across all your skin
You know my guard's paper thin
I still love the way you smell
I'm so nervous can't you

Tell me something
Other than what I've been facing
I'm so lovely
At making destructive decisions
Tell me something
Other than what I've been facing
I'm so lovely
At making destructive decisions

Lay your sin here on the ground
What was lost can still be found
Lock the door inside our room
God put me here just for you
You for me I cannot see
How this is not just a memory
A better time of a better place
But that is me if you choose to stay
You for me I cannot see
How this is not just a memory
A better time of a better place
But that is me if you choose to stay

I know I know
I know nothing
I know I know
I know nothing
I know I know
I know nothing
I know I know
