

Forlorn

Meadowlark

Right before you fell
You thought you knew the Universe so well
Don't you fear that it might leave you here alone?

And don't forget the rain
It would always wash your sins away
Don't you fear that it might leave you here so cold?

Your eyes are forlorn and tired
Your eyes are forlorn and tired

You're always on the run
Leaving all the sadness of the sun
Don't you fear that it might leave you here so cold, and you're afraid of love

We're fools inside a fire
And now the flames have spread to your denial
Don't you fear that it might leave you here?

Your eyes are forlorn and tired
Your eyes are forlorn and tired
Your heart is stood in the wild
Your eyes are forlorn and tired

But don't you worry about it
Don't you worry about it

Your eyes are forlorn and tired
Your eyes are forlorn and tired
Your heart is stood in the wild
Your eyes are forlorn and tired
