

We're Falling In Love Again

Merle Haggard

We're falling in love again after all these years
We're smiling for real again after all these tears
Somehow life took its toll and caused us to frown
And the weight on our shoulders took us all the way down

But, the children are grown now as our sunset appears
We're falling in love again after all these years

We're having good times again in old honky-tonk bars
Staying out late again, makin' love 'neath the stars
Slow dancing together to an old country band
Caressing your fingertips and holding your hand

The children are grown now as our sunset appears
We're falling in love again after all these years
Yes, I'm falling in love again after all these years
