

The Damage You Do

Mesh

You've got it good
You're cruel to everyone
You get their feelings
And you shake them 'til you're all alone
You had the time
You had the motive now
Pretend it hurts
and they run to you from miles around

Dressed to kill
By the hands that never will
Looks appeal
To what the feelings don't reveal.

And I can't penetrate the lies
But the damage you do
Is written across your eyes
So don't say you love me

And I can't delegate the blame
But it all comes out
Sounding just the same.
So don't try to touch me.

You turn them on
You switch it off again
A stream of lovers hanging
Rotting at your door again.
You pull the strings
You've had them dance for you.
You build them up
'til they think they've got a bone to chew.

You steal to live
From the hands that never give
Look within
Through the doors that don't cave in.

And I can't penetrate the lies
But the damage you do
Is written across your eyes
So don't say you love me

And I can't delegate the blame
But it all comes out
Sounding just the same.
So don't try to touch me.

The words you said just broke in two

You steal to live
From the hands that never give
Look within
Through the doors that don't cave in.

And I can't penetrate the lies
But the damage you do

Is written across your eyes
So don't say you love me

And I can't delegate the blame
But it all comes out
Sounding just the same.
So don't try to touch me.

The words you said just broke in two

And I can't penetrate the lies
But the damage you do
Is written across your eyes (is it somehow rewarding)
So don't say you love me (or some kind of warning?)

And I can't delegate the blame
But it all comes out
Sounding just the same.
So don't try to touch me. (is it somehow rewarding)
So don't try to touch me. (or some kind of warning?)
So don't try to touch me. (is it somehow rewarding)
So don't try to touch me. (or some kind of warning?)