

Dialogue

Michael Johnson

Stranded in a waiting room, he turns to her, how do you do
I know the book you're reading and I've always like his point of view

I'm flying out of here to somewhere I have been Set out to find it years ago and I'm finally heading in

Have you been to France, I hear it's wonderful this time of year

Have you really seen the English countryside, do people ride
All I've ever seen is Houston, it's flat and rainy and rich
And California on my own and neither one quite fits

He has got the world to give and she is on her own
Together they can show each other what they cannot see alone

Cancel all your reservations, it's a now or never stand
Final call and off they go, leaving hand in hand

And he has got the world to give and she can bring him home
Together they can show each other what they cannot see alone
He has got the world to give and she can bring him home
Together they can show each other what they cannot see alone

He turns to her...