

Half The Moon

Michael Johnson

Half the moon is shining tonight, half the moon is pitch black
And I got half the chance that you might turn around and come back
And half my love is seeing the light and half my love is still blind
It keeps on thinking tomorrow you'll change your mind

Half our hearts were doin' just fine, half our hearts were in doubt
Half the time while walking the line, I ended up stepping out
Half my prayers were praying to God and half my prayers were to you
Tonight it looks like the answers are overdue

And I am feeling just how hard half the moon can pull
I swear my heart might crack in two if that moon were full

Half the moon is shining tonight, half the moon's up and gone
You must have taken half of its light to find the road that you're on
And half my love is seeing the truth, half my love is still blind
It makes that missing half the moon hard to find
It makes that missing half the moon hard to find