Escape

Michelle Featherstone

Much to my surprise,
You've got that look within your eyes,
And it keeps reeling me in,
Reeling me in.

All I thought before,
Has come a knocking at my door,
And it's beginning again,
Beginning again.

Every minute that we wait is just a moment that slowly slips away.
Every second that we're here's another chance to stay.

I know I should be leaving,
But this familiar feeling is in my way.
It comes so uninvited,
But I don't even fight it,
There's no way to escape,
To Escape.

I thought we'd moved beyond this,
I thought we'd taken strides,
And were ahead of the game,
Ahead of the game.

No one ever planned this,
So no one has to worry,
About taking the blame,
Taking the blame.

Every minute that we wait, is just a moment that slowly slips away.
Every second that we're here's another chance to stay.

I know I should be leaving,
But this familiar feeling is in my way.
It comes so uninvited,
But I don't even fight it,
There's no way to escape.

And we are not accountable,
And we are not responsible,
And this is not controllable.

I know I should be leaving,
But this familiar feeling is in my way.
It comes so uninvited,
But I don't even fight it,
There's no way to escape.

I know I should be leaving but this familiar feeling is in my way
It comes so uninvited but I don't even fight it
There's no way to escape.

To escape,
Escape.
To escape.
