

Teardrops on My Tombstone

Mickey Avalon

Cover me in kerosene and burn down my home
You're gonna have to bury me
Now you're nothing but a teardrop on my tombstone
Cover me in kerosene and burn down my home
You're gonna have to bury me
Now you're nothing but a teardrop on my tombstone

I was born in the back of a black Cadillac, while my momma screamed loud and my daddy smoked crack
I was cursed from the start and I never had nothing
Ain't afraid of the dark put my head in the oven
I've been up and down and smiling, frowning
Smoked up at the valley now I'm climbing up the mountain
So if you want to kill me you're gonna have to bring a canon
'Cause I'm Mickey Avalon, the last man standing

Cover me in kerosene and burn down my home
You're gonna have to bury me
Now you're nothing but a teardrop on my tombstone
Cover me in kerosene and burn down my home
You're gonna have to bury me
Now you're nothing but a teardrop on my tombstone

She never fit in so she ran like the wind to a place where they traded the souls to give in
She was doomed out the gate with the face something tragic
Never knew about love so she chasing the dragon
Now she fronting, acting like nothing had happened
Crying like a baby while the whole worlds laughing
If you want to be the one that puts me in the casket
You're gonna have to do a little better than my last bitch

Cover me in kerosene and burn down my home
You're gonna have to bury me
Now you're nothing but a teardrop on my tombstone
Cover me in kerosene and burn down my home
You're gonna have to bury me
Now you're nothing but a teardrop on my tombstone
