You ever wake up and feel like
You're standing in the middle of a crossroads
But no one ever told you which way to go?
Like every step is right and wrong at the same time
Some days I feel unstoppable
Like I was meant for something bigger than this
Like the universe is whispering my name, pushing me forward
And then there are days when I feel like I'm sinking
Lost in the noise of expectations
Drowning in choices I never even wanted to make
They say success is everything
But no one ever tells you that success can feel empty
That dreams can become cages
That the things you once loved can start to feel like chains
Maybe, maybe I'm just tired
Maybe I've been running for so long
That I forgot what it feels like to just be
But one thing I do know
This isn't the end of my story, not yet
So if this is a crossroads
Then I guess it's time to choose
