Lonely and Gone

Montgomery Gentry

Pulled in the driveway, picked up the paper Found my key, and unlocked the door I walked in, felt like a stranger Like I'd never, been there before And as I wandered room to room It was silent as a tomb

Coulda heard a tear drop, coulda heard a heart break
Never saw the flood come, even though I felt the rain
Never heard a house sound, so loud with memories
Where there used to be a happy home
In the house on the corner of lonely and gone

If she talked about leavin, I wasn't listenin If she showed me a sign, well I never saw Did she stop believin, did I stop givin Can't put my finger on what went wrong Now the quietest noise I'm told Is the sound of letting go.

Coulda heard a tear drop, coulda heard a heart break
Never saw the flood come, even though I felt the rain
Never heard a house sound, so loud with memories
Where there used to be a happy home
In the house on the corner of lonely and gone

Oh never heard a house sound, so loud with memories Where there used to be a happy home In the house on the corner, in the house on the corner Of lonely and gone
