Animus

Monuments

Fluctuate with waves bending on the threshold of glory
Changing shape inside an ocean filled with my deepest desires
Following the siren's call from every direction
To show me what I am
A passenger in a foreign land

Astray, and void of purpose
I've wandered aimlessly
The flames beyond the surface
Now guiding me

To set me free

Searching for a moment of clarity
To bring me towards the future that I was destined to live

Shedding my disguise, I realize I am desensitized
By all the cries to compromise
A life I have visualized through bleeding eyes
Immobilized by the turning tides

And how long must I keep on reaching
For worlds beyond my grasp?
And how long will my heart stay beating
Before collapse?

Before collapse
Before collapse

All that I wanted is part of me at last
No longer haunted by demons of my past

Astray, and void of purpose
I've wandered aimlessly
The flames beyond the surface
Now guiding me
Through darkened waters
I'm torn asunder
By all that I choose to be
Embrace my every burden
To set me free

Guided by flames above the surface
Now justified, I accept my purpose
