...And as it's fading to a drowsy blue to live in I keep my eyes closed and pretend that I'm still sleeping

there's a hole when she's smiling and a fire when she's sad and a void when she's glad when I feel how she's humming how alive she's inside I only hear how I lied cosmic comic-strip

behind this wall I stay forgiven mirrors cracking clear the view daring me to drown in there and take her with me

From your lips to Gods ears and to the wind....

there's a hole....

and there's always a reason yet it's so hard to tell from this wishing well though these thoughts are colliding I'm left bound by the spell of this wishing well....